MISCELLANEOUS READING. A PRETTY LOVE SONG. I love you—'tis the simplest way The thing I fell to tell; Yet, if I told it all the day, You'd never goes how well. You are my comfort and my light; My very life you seem; I think of you all day; all night

Tis but of you I dream. There's pleasure in the lightest word That you can speak to me; My soul is like the Æolian chord, And vibrates still to thee. I never read the love-song yet. So thrilling, fond, or true,

But in my own heart I have met Some kinder thought of you. I bless the shadow on your face, The light upon your hair; I like, for hours, to sit and trace The passing changes there: I love to hear your voice's tone, Alth ugh you should not say A single word, to dream upon

When that had died away. O ! you are kindly as the beam That warms where'er it plays; And you are gentle as a dream Of happy future days; And you are strong to do the right, And swift the wrong to fee, And, if you were not half so bright, You're all the world to me.

COMPLETELY SOLD. Under this heading, the Mobile Evening News, of the 2d inst., has the following good

As the Citronelle train was on its downward trip to this city yesterday morning, an incide at occurred that caused no little amusement to the passengers. As the train was approaching Eight Mile Station, a lady, quite elegantly attired, with a lovely bouquet of wild flowers in hand, and face concealed from view by a handsome veil, was discovered standing on the platform. The train was ordered to stop, of course, to take in the fair passenger-and stop it did. The gallant conductor immediately jumped out upon the platform, cried out as usual, "all aboard!" at the same time raising his hat and politely, extending his hand to help the lady abourd. She, however, did not recognise his gallantry, but stood dumb and motionless as a statue. The astonished conductor advanced, involuntarily raised the veil, when lo; instead of a face of female flesh and beauty, the words 'April Fool," inscribed on a black "lightwood chunk." met his astonished vision! He started back, gave the signal to be off with unusual violence, jumped aboard, exclaiming to the innocent engineer, in a stentorian voice; "Who the b-Il told you to stop here!"

NEWLY INVENTED MATCH. A new match has been invented in France. It is designed to supercede the present dangerous lucifer and locofoco match, and is said to answer the purpose completely. It is impossible to ignite this match without bringing it in contact with friction paper or cloth prepared for the express object; and ted Forks, and Spoons, Hinges, Screws, Locks, the two being always kept apart, except when to be used, neither can take fire from spontaneous combustion, or through the theft of rate and mice.
